below the gaff and the others are fifteen clothe apart. The throat halyards are rove through a four sheave and a three sheave block. The four sheave block is bridled on the mast and the three sheave block is on the gaff. The halyards of all the sails are of steel wire, but the hauling parts are of Manila rope. The mainsail is laced to twenty-one aluminum hoops on the mast and the top hoop reaches a little below the lower spreaders. The latter are set well to the forward side of the mast and the jaws of the gaff go past without being pushed out as they used to have to do on the Shamrock I. The luff of the mainsail is also of steel wire. The main sheet is double ended and lead forward so that the sail can be trimmed from either side of the yacht. There are two blocks in bridles another on a sling on the boom. One book is in traveller and one on each side of the deck. After the mainsail was hoisted the boom struts were attached.

The topmast is a lofty spar. It is said to be 58 feet long, about ten of which buries in the mainmast. The latter | and jackyard topsails. They beat out to is 105 feet long, six of which buries in the step. The topsail sheet is of steel rope. Two winches on the deck are for use to haul down the jib and jib topsail sheets.

Mr. Duncan went aboard early in the morning and then at 10 o'clock the moorings were cast off, jib and fore staysail broken out and the Constitution was under way. The sun was shining brightly by this time and only a faint breeze was rippling the water from the northwest. She started off, heading to the south, with her boom to port and the main sheet started. Capt. Nat had the wheel and his critical eye took in the whole yacht at a glance. She pushed her way through the water easily, and toots from vessels in the vicinity gave her a cordial greeting. Just as the Contitution got under way the Eugenia, the steam yacht owned by John B. Herreshoff, went into commission and then with Mr. and Mrs. Herreshoff and friends on board followed the new boat down the bay. Eight minutes after the Constitution cast off her moorings a small jib topsail was sent up. The wind was light and the sails hung in wrinkles. Occasionally a little puff would fill the jib topsail and the yacht would move easily under its pressure. At 10:25 o'clock the wind came in from the southeast and the boom was gybed over to starboard and sheet trimmed flat. Then the gaif topsail was sent up and it was the only illfitting piece of canvas of the lot. At 10:30 o'clock the vacht was off Hog Island Point. There was not a ruffle on the surface of the water. Sheets were hauled flat and every one on board was busy doing a hundred and one things to get in shape. Then the wind got back to north-northwest and again the yacht gybed. At 10:55 o'clock she passed Hog Island light vessel and the bell was rung as a salute.

The wind puffed up a bit here and filled wind freshened a little more she laid over until all her bronze on the lee side was under water and about a foot of bright metal showed on the weather side. There was just a little ripple in the water under her bow, but the run was clean. Mr. Duncan then took the wheel and Nat Herreshoff stood aft, watched the wake of the yacht and then leaned over the side to see how she was going through the water. The wind soon died out again and when off Sandy Point she dropped her head sails and came to anchor. The Mount Morris, the tender of the yacht, had followed and the crew all went to dinner. At 11 o'clock a nice breeze had struck in from the south-southwest, head sails were rock II. The course for to-morrow's race hoisted again and the Constitution started off, close hauled on the starboard tack. She travelled fast under this breeze, and after ten minutes wore round and run back. Then she hauled on the wind again. She was four points off the wind, and after two or three short tacks Mr. Duncan were her round quickly and the yacht lay over until her lee rail was well down. There was some trouble with the bowsprit. It had probably worked a little loose, and wrenches were used to tighten up the bolts on each side. The main sheet was eased off and she ran at about five miles an hour.

At 2 o'clock the sheet was trimmed in again and she hauled on the wind. The latter by this time had increased to about ten knots, and with all sheets pinned flat the Constitution was going a good nine miles an hour. She worked down the bay as far as Half Way Rock below Prudence Island and then wore round and ran back home. Off Hog Island ightship the jib topsail and gaff topsail were lowered, and off Bristol Ferry the staysail was run down. At 3:10 o'clock she came up with the wind, the mainsail was lowered, and under jib only she ran back to her mooring, which was picked up a little later.

There are still lots of little things to be done on the yacht, but she will probably be turned over to Mr. Duncan at the end of the week and will then go to Newport to be put in racing trim. She answered her helm readily to-day. With a few spins all the fulness in the sails will be stretched out, and by the time she meets the Columbia she will have as fine a suit as was ever seen on a big cutter.

SLACKENED BOBSTAY AND WABBLING TOPMAST FORCE HER TO GO EASY.

Does Good Work Against Shamrook I. Up to the Time of the Accident-Old Challenger Nearly Three Minutes Ahead at Turn and Wins the Trial by 1 Minute and 34 Seconds -King Edward to Sail on New Boat To-day.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. SOUTHAMPTON, May 21 -The two Sham tocks went out again to-day for another trial | race, but the result in no way gave a line on the comparative merits of the two boats owing to the fact that the slackening of the challenger's bobstay and the consequent waboling of her topmast forced her to go easy after she had done four miles of windward work. The course was nine miles to windward, from No Man's Fort and return, and until the accident to the bobstay the Shamrock II did excellent work .

The boats left their anchorage off Cowes at 10 o'clock in the morning. They both carried whole mainsails, forestay sails, jibs the fort, a distance of seven miles.

The Shamrock I. got away first after the signal for the start and was almost a quarter of a mile in the lead when the challenger crossed the line. There was a fine sailing breeze from the southeast and the sea was smooth The Shamrock II performed wonderfully well on the wind and drew up on her opponent so quickly that off Gilkiker Fort she was on her weather quarter. When the challenger met the Shamrock I, the latter was on the wrong tack, but she held on and forced the Shamrock II. into the wind to escape a foul

The trial started at 11:35 o'clock, and jib. topsails were broken out as each boat crossed the line. The Shamrock II had the weather berth, and on the first half dozen long boards she opened out a lead of about two minutes When laying off on the starboard tack to fetch the Nab Rock Buoy the challenger considerably overreached, thus letting the Shamrock I take the mark ahead of her. The times at this point were:

During the rest of the windward work the challenger suffered from her slackened bobstay, which was spliced on the bowsprit and BELGIUM DEFENDS GREAT BRITAIN. shacklebolt instead of being made fast with turnbuckles, which would have allowed of the slack being taken up as soon as it was made. Meanwhile the breeze had freshened and there was a big swell, into which the challenger smashed badly, throwing large quantities of white water from her bows.

The Shamrock I, had all the best of the wind during the thresh, and she romped up to the Erin, which was used as the turning at this point show;

As soon as each boat rounded the mark she broke out her spinnaker to starboard for a dead run back as far as the Nab Lightship. TRIALS OF THE INDEPENDENCE.

Strike of Machinists Leaves Much of the Iron Work Unfinished.

BOSTON, May 21 -While the Constitution s having her first trial spins and Shamrock II is racing daily with the other Shamrock troubles almost without number beset the Independence, and the trend of all the diff cuities is toward delaying the day on which she will hoist sail for the first time. Over at Lawley's the machinists have gone on strike leaving unfinished a lot of iron work to b used on the spars of the Boston boat. George Lawley is worried over the outlook and said this afternoon that as soon as he could get some machinists the spar from could b made ready in a short time.

It was expected that the steel mast would be stepped to-day, but another link in the chain of unfortunate delays was forged by the mability of the workmen to get the spar out of the boiler shop and down the whar to the shears. The riggers say the Constitution and Independence do not resemble each other in the slightest degree. Designer Crowninshield was at East Boston this afternoon and he was much disappointed at not finding the mast in place. The Independence made some water during the last two days, but it was mostly rain which came through the hatches. Mr. Crowninshield said it would be about ten days before the bout had her trial spin.

who was sentenced by Judge Seabury to five months in the Kings County Penitentiary for keeping a disorderly house escaped from Constable Patrick Lamb yesterday while he was taking her to the Queens County Jail Accompanying Constable Lamb and his prisoner was the latter's brother, Thomas Bolas of New York and her husband. When the party reached the Long Island Railroad depot Murray left them. On arriving at Long Island Railroad the Long Island City Mrs. Murray complained of feeling ill and requested the officer to stop at a hotel to permit her to revive herself. Finally, in consideration of the woman's delicate condition, Lamb complied with her request and entered a hotel two blocks from the inil. request and entered a note to be the jail.

Bolas then left them. Mrs. Murray entered Bolas then left them. Lamb took up his station outside the door. When the woman didn't come out after five minutes Lamb went to look for her. She had escaped through a window. Lamb hurried to the Thirty-fourth street ferry, but the prisoner was not there. Lamb reported his loss to Sheriff Wood, who removed him from further duty at the County Court. Sheriff Wood sent out an alarm that Mrs. Murray is an escaped convict.

CLAIRVOYANT GAVE BALSAMS. Child Patient Died and Doctor Refused to Grant Death Certificate.

BATAVIA, N Y. May 21 -Attention of the Coroner and District Attorney was called to-day to the death of ten-months-old Robert Dean Thompson on Sunday night following taking of certain balsams prescribed by Mrs J. H. Mattison of Buffalo, a clairby Mrs J. H. Mattison of Buffale, a clairvoyant, who gave the mother of the infant the medicine and directions for taking it without having seen the little sufferer.
The child had not been strong from birth, and on a recent vi-it to Buffalo Mrs. Thompson visited the clairvoyant. After taking the child's name, age and residence, the clairvoyant went into a state which she declaired was the same as the infant's physical condition. The doctor called on Sunday, found the baby dying, and refused to grant a death certificate. The Coroner to-day, after investigation, decided that death came from improper medicine, with dropsy of the brain
